Thanks for your note. I'm on vacation between February 18th and February 27th and will have limited access to email. Please write back or call after February 27th if any response is needed.

Thanks,
Megan

I'm unavailable. Please propose something after February 28th. As Mr. Matt is well aware, I'll be in Mexico. As per parenting plan, I was required to offer Peter the right to watch the children during my absence. He agreed in December. I will not have access to WiFi or data.

1. I have not been served notice of anything requiring an appearance. Mr. Wehrman attested to serving me something. He has not. Please explain what matter requires an emergency appearance.
2. A transfer is required for a motion for transfer of venue.

I regard this bizarre commandment from a law firm associate to attend court without basis in five days to be bizarre.

Please provide notice and a hearing date that is reasonable as required by law. I will follow up February 28th.

How to Fix It

The recipient's email server rejected your message because it appears to violate a security or policy setting the recipient's email admin has set up. A common reason for rejection is that your message might have been suspected as spam. To try to fix this issue, try one or more of the following:

- Modify your message, or change how you're sending the message, using the guidance in this article: Bulk E-mailing Best Practices for Senders Using Forefront Online Protection for Exchange. Then resend your message.
- Contact the recipient by some other means (by phone, for example) and ask them to ask their email admin to add your email address, or your domain name, to their allowed senders list.
